

Transportation systems of the future should include consideration for safe bicycle routes for those citizens who are seriously interested in exercise as a method to maintain good health. If there were more safe routes to and from business sites essential to life. Safe routes to grocery stores banks and department stores would help.